RIT score. The number on either side of the RIT score defines the RIT range. The middle number in bolded text is the student's percentile rank, or the percentage of students who had a RIT score less than or equal to this student's score as observed in the NWEA norms study. This range appears when the student has taken a reading test. You can use it with online resources to identify ...

For the research behind changes to the 2015 RIT Scale Norms, please see page 6. For many reasons, it is inadvisable to compare performance of a student on one set of test norms to his or her performance on another. NWEA strongly advises educators to use the 2015 norms because they provide the current and most accurate reference for MAP scores.

RIT scales, like scales underlying most educational tests, are built from data about the performance of individual examinees on individual items. The theory governing scale construction is called Item Response Theory (IRT). NWEA uses a specific IRT model conceived by Danish mathematician, Georg Rasch, (1901-1980).
